Example of works

If a body part gets bigger, erected inside of these iron condoms, it will feel pain. There is no space to grow freely.

This work shows how patriarchy shapes boys. They grow under pressure and control just like those body parts would feel the pain and pressure inside of these iron condoms.

The small sculptures on the tip represent the systems and experiences that made them suffer and grow with pain.

This project illustrates the idea of mimicking nature to solve complex human problems in a kitsch and humorous way.

the Fuckmachine: A hand-pedal mechanism with two mirrors centering queer p1easeure and agency. It asks whether p1easeure is self-given or shaped by imagined others and societal ideals of desire.
