

DIEGO PASQUALIN

Sculptor

BIO

THERE ARE NIGHTS THAT SMELL OF THE
NIGHT: TOP
NOTES OF
ALCOHOL THAT
OPEN A HEART
OF SKIN AND
STRINGS, ONLY
TO SINK INTO
THE WARM,
MURKY BASE
NOTES OF THE
ABYSS, SEMEN,
AND URINE

Diego Pasqualin | Sculptor & Curator

Diego Pasqualin (b. 1985, Varallo, Italy) is a sculptor, educator, and curator whose work explores the tension of the body and the materiality of the soul. He earned his MFA in Sculpture from the Brera Academy of Fine Arts in Milan, where he also specialized in Art Education.

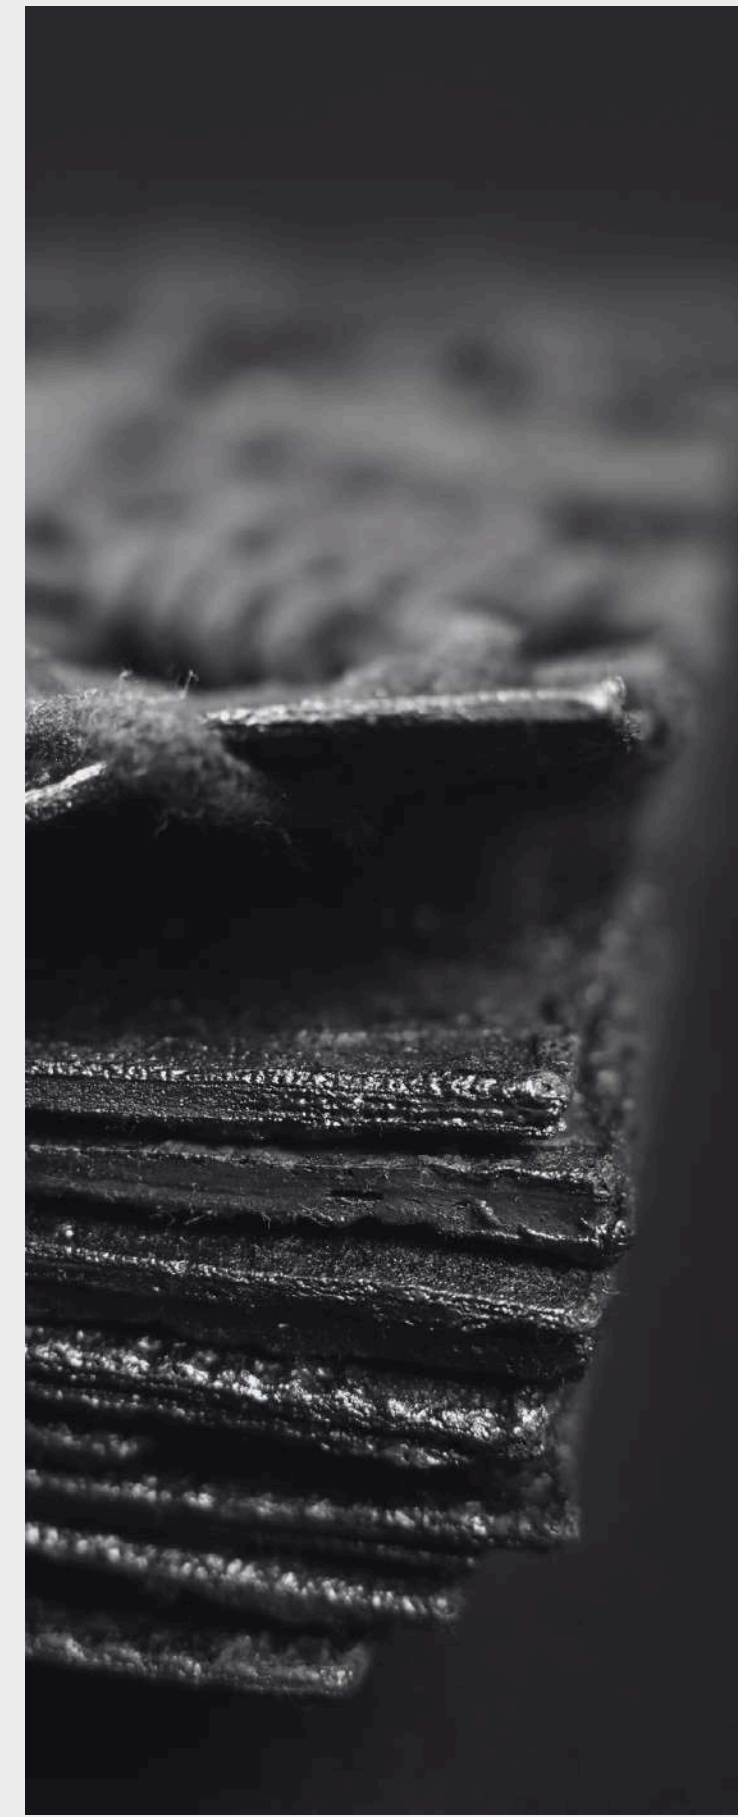

Since 2015, he has served as the Artistic Director of the non-profit cultural center StudioDieci in Vercelli, a role that complements his intensive international exhibition schedule. His career highlights include solo exhibitions such as Catabasi (Varese, 2024), Quel che resta del fuoco (Vercelli, 2022), and Shah Mat | The King is Dead (Milan, 2016). His work has also gained international recognition through participation in major group shows, including the Florence Biennale and the Hands Across the Pacific Art Exhibition in China.

In 2014, Pasqualin expanded his artistic dialogue to the United States with the collaborative project Received Grace at Brooklyn Borough Hall in New York. As an educator, he has taught Three-Dimensional Design at the Liceo Artistico A. Alciati since 2016 and served as a Professor of Design at the ACME Academy of Fine Arts in Novara (2018–2023). His commitment to social impact is further evidenced by his direction of the Nati per Leggere | Libri d'Artista project, supported by the Piedmont Region.

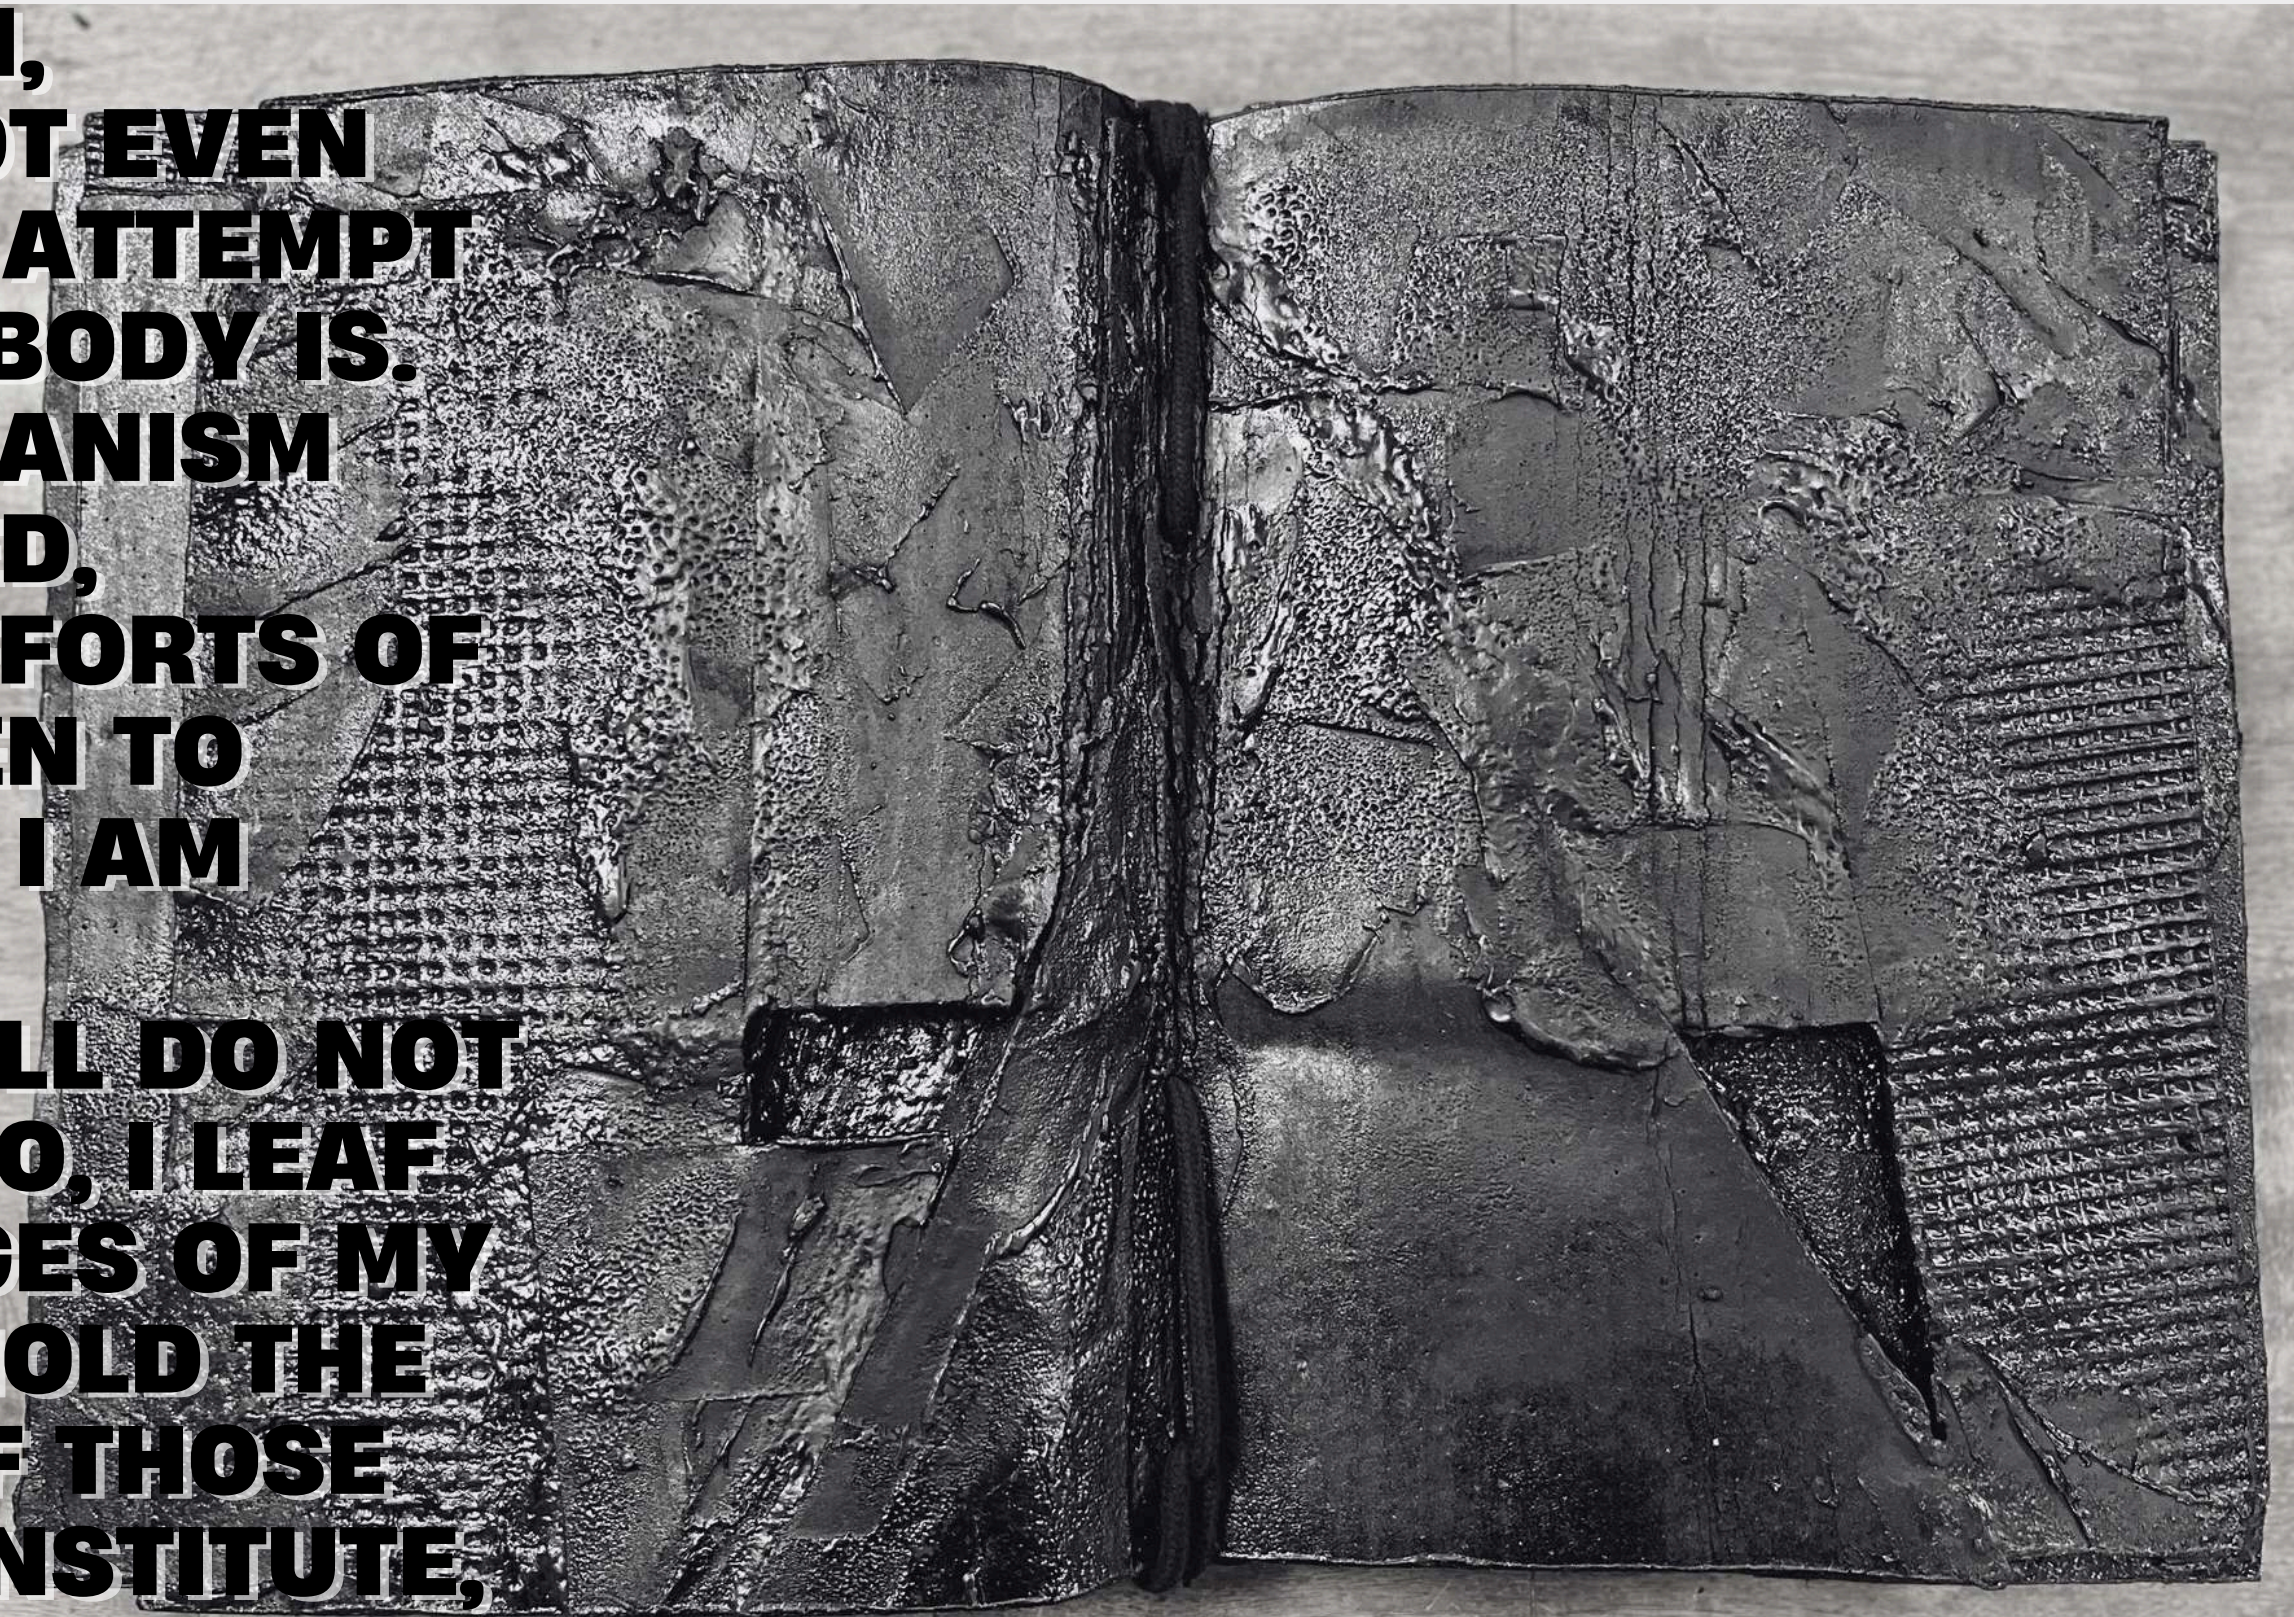

WORKS

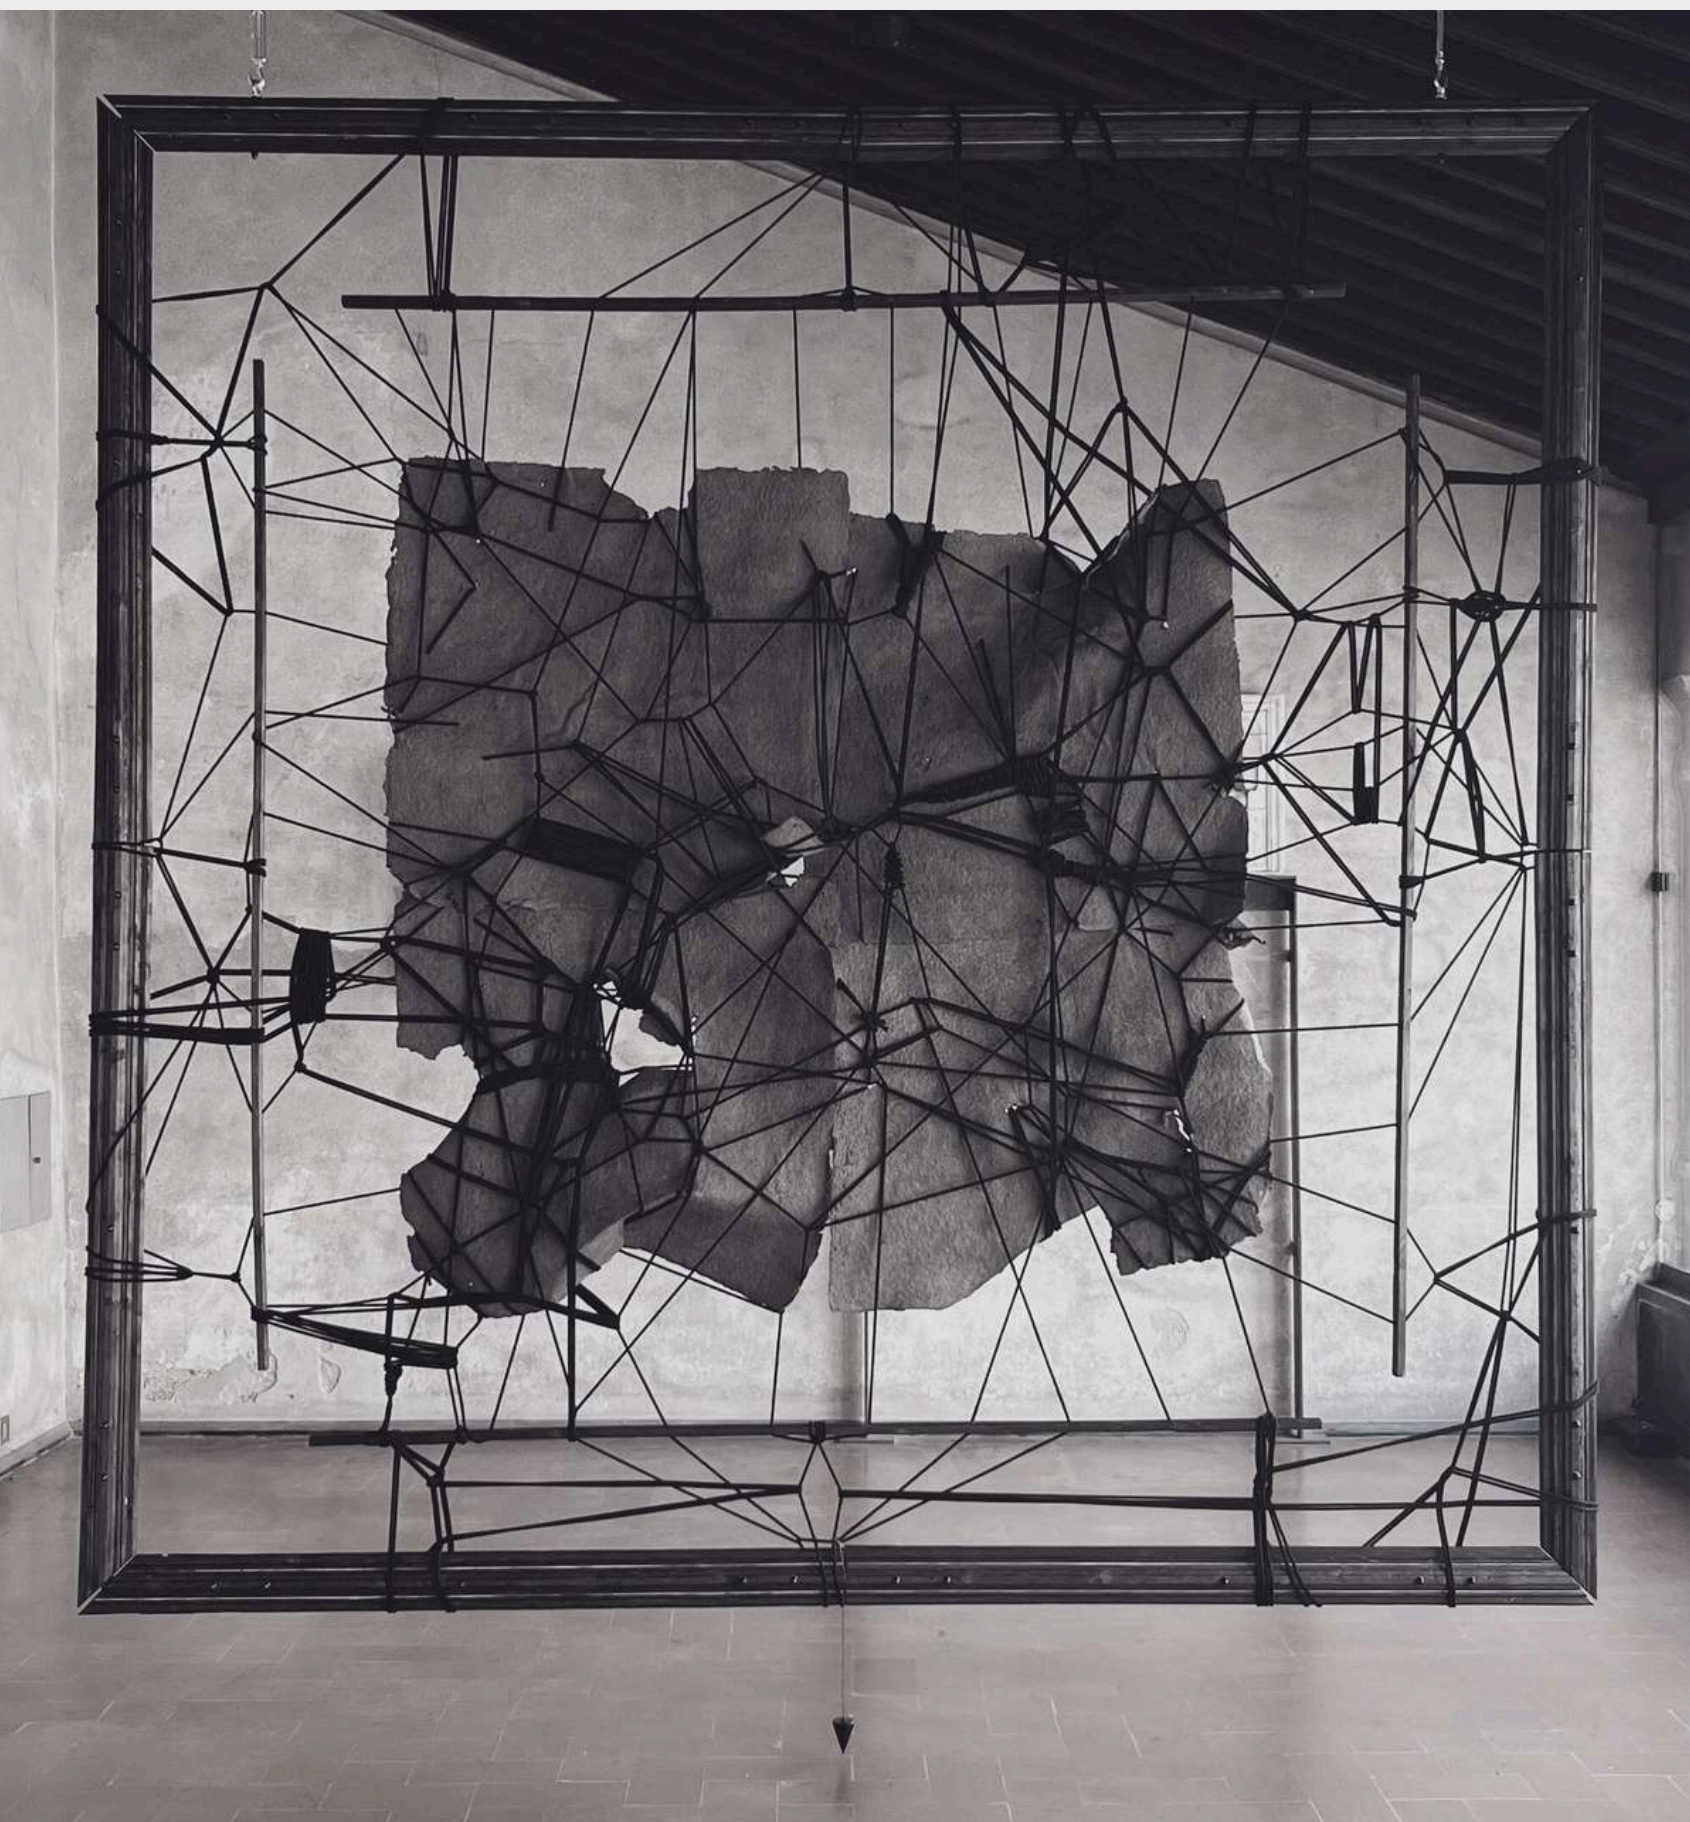

KATABASIS (BOOK)

2024, Burnt bitumen sheathing, ropes
13 3/4×9 3/4×3 1/2 inches

WORDS ARE NOT ENOUGH,
OR PERHAPS THEY DO NOT EVEN
EXIST, IN THE CONSTANT ATTEMPT
TO DECIPHER WHAT THE BODY IS.
NOT EVEN THE MERE ORGANISM
HAS BEEN FULLY DECODED,
DESPITE THE TIRELESS EFFORTS OF
THOSE WHO HAVE CHOSEN TO STUDY THE VERY THINGS I AM COMPOSED OF.
I, WHO 'LIVE MYSELF,' STILL DO NOT KNOW 'HOW I AM'; AND SO, I LEAF
THROUGH ABSTRACT PAGES OF MY OWN ENTRAILS, WHICH HOLD THE
BONDS AND TEXTURES OF THOSE WARM ORGANS THAT CONSTITUTE,
DISTINGUISH, AND DEFINE ME.

KATABASIS (SHROUD#2)

2026, Handmade
paper, ash, wood, rope,
plumb line
118 x 118 inches

I often find myself embarking on nocturnal journeys, though it would be more accurate to call them true pilgrimages in search of myself and, perhaps, also in search of you. I have always been afraid of the dark, even now that I am grown; yet, despite the shiver that pervades me, I have never yielded, and I madly love to traverse it. To smell it. To enjoy its pandering and perverse nature and, at times, to indulge in temporary lies just to cling to the idea that the Night is still there... for me, for you.

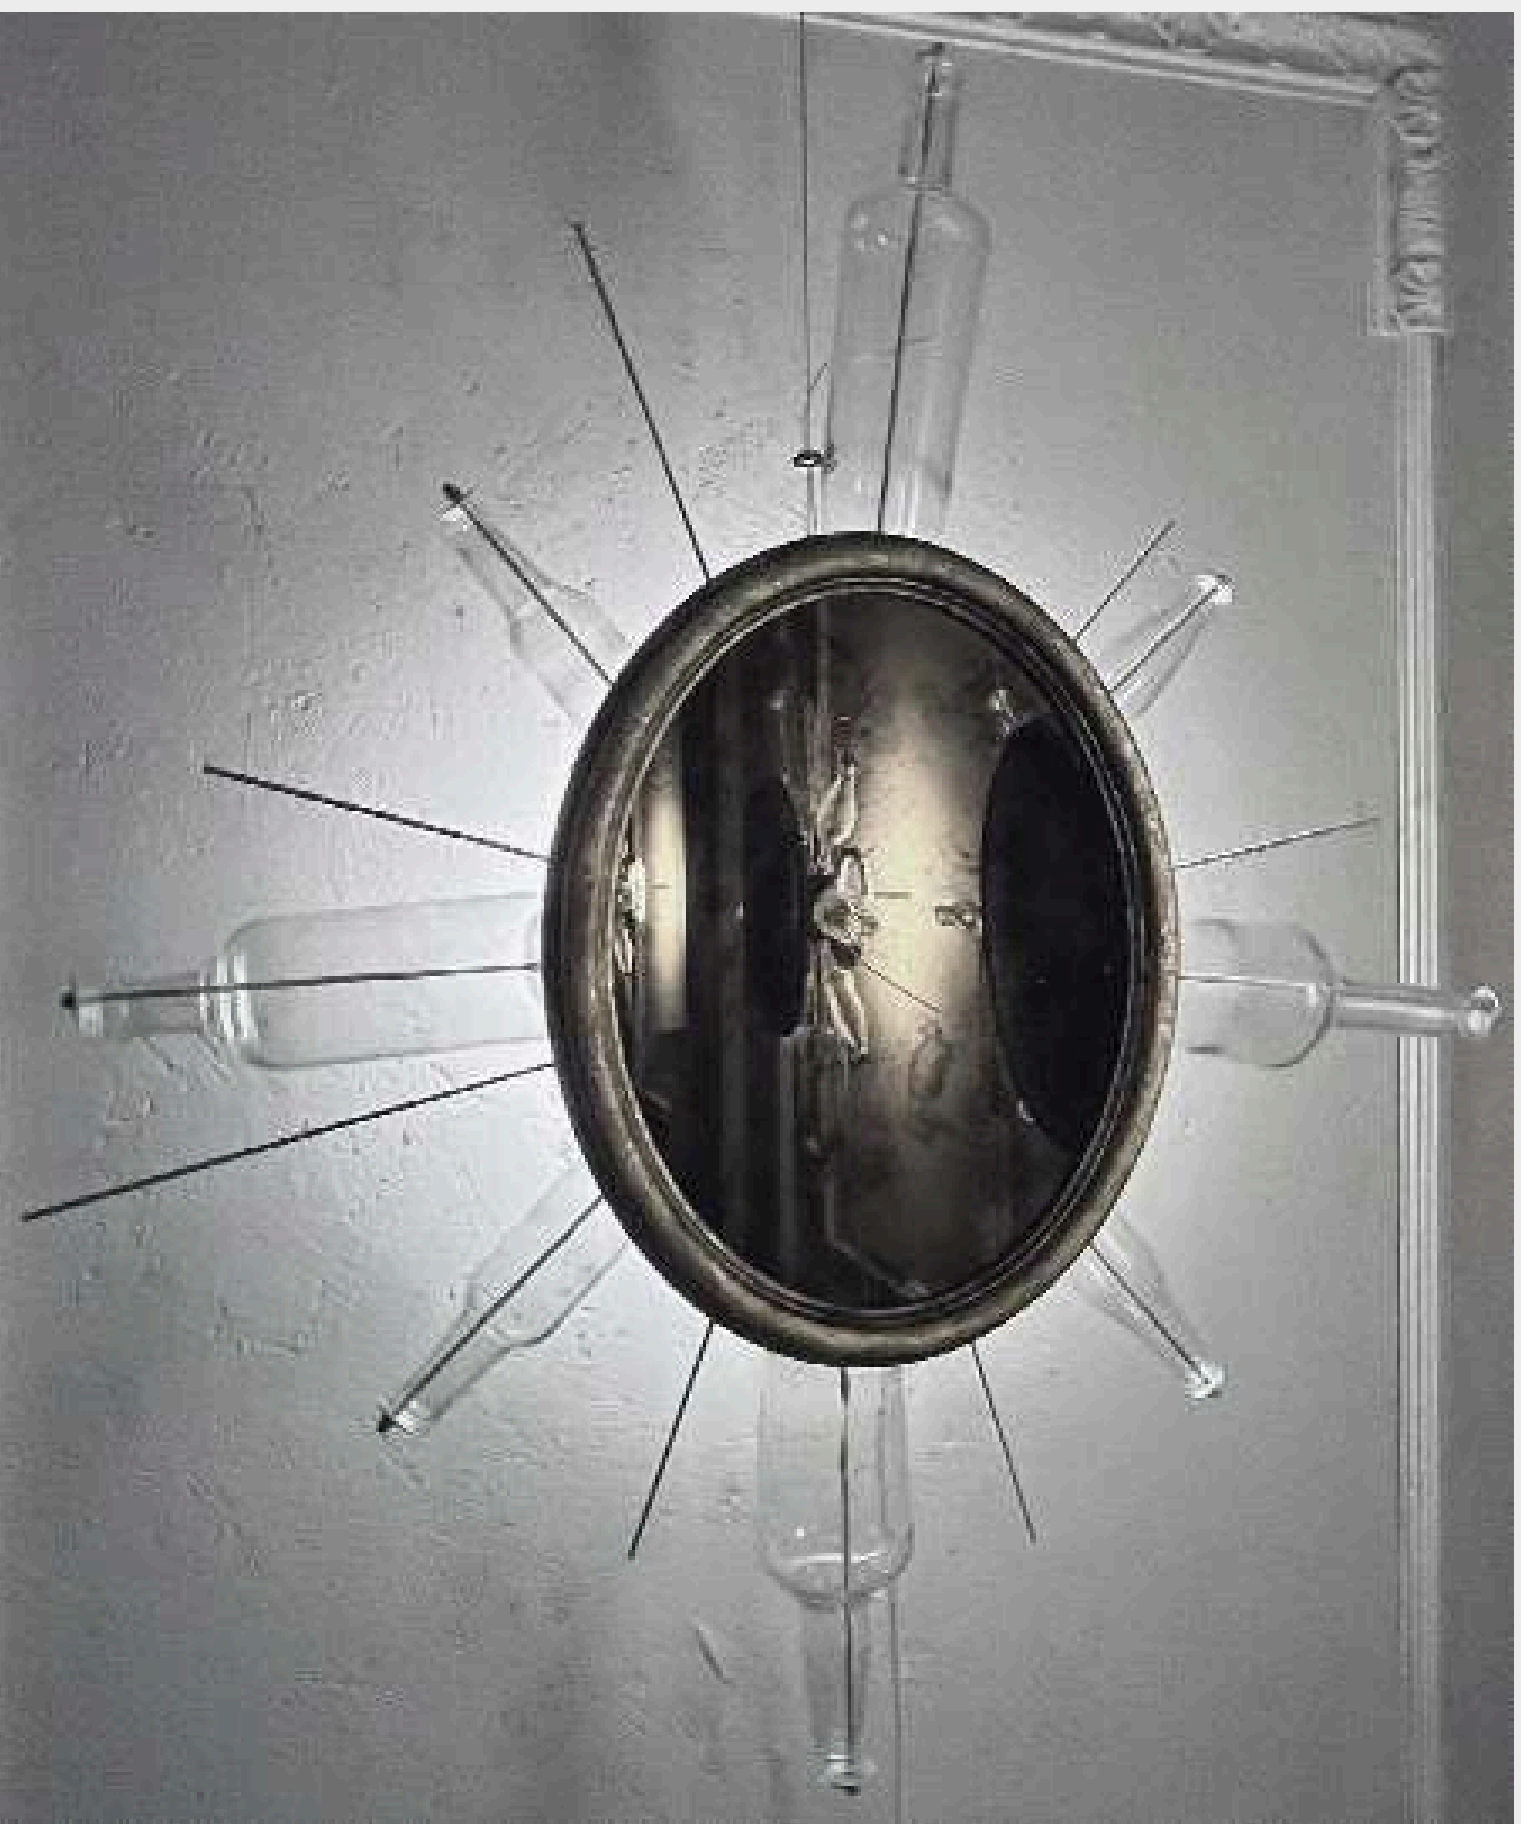

Suspended in time, with perspectives annulled, to the sound of old, crackling vinyls and faithful to my ice-less Negroni, I entrust to you what remains of my soul. Like intertwined ropes, it remains in tension, showing every point of laceration—where it gave in and where it resisted, struggling not to crumble too much upon itself. One day, I too will learn to let go; I will stop striving to hold everything and everyone in that precarious balance my heart still imposes on me today. Perhaps.

One day I will perform that opposite movement, my anabasis; but for now, my descent into the underworld invites me to search for and understand that poison which can become medicine. And, perhaps, one day Orpheus will play for me. I will follow him and, if he does not turn back, without a word, I shall be saved.

VIA DOLOROSA

2018, Installation of 14 elements
Wood, glass bottles, iron, mirror
Overall dimensions variable

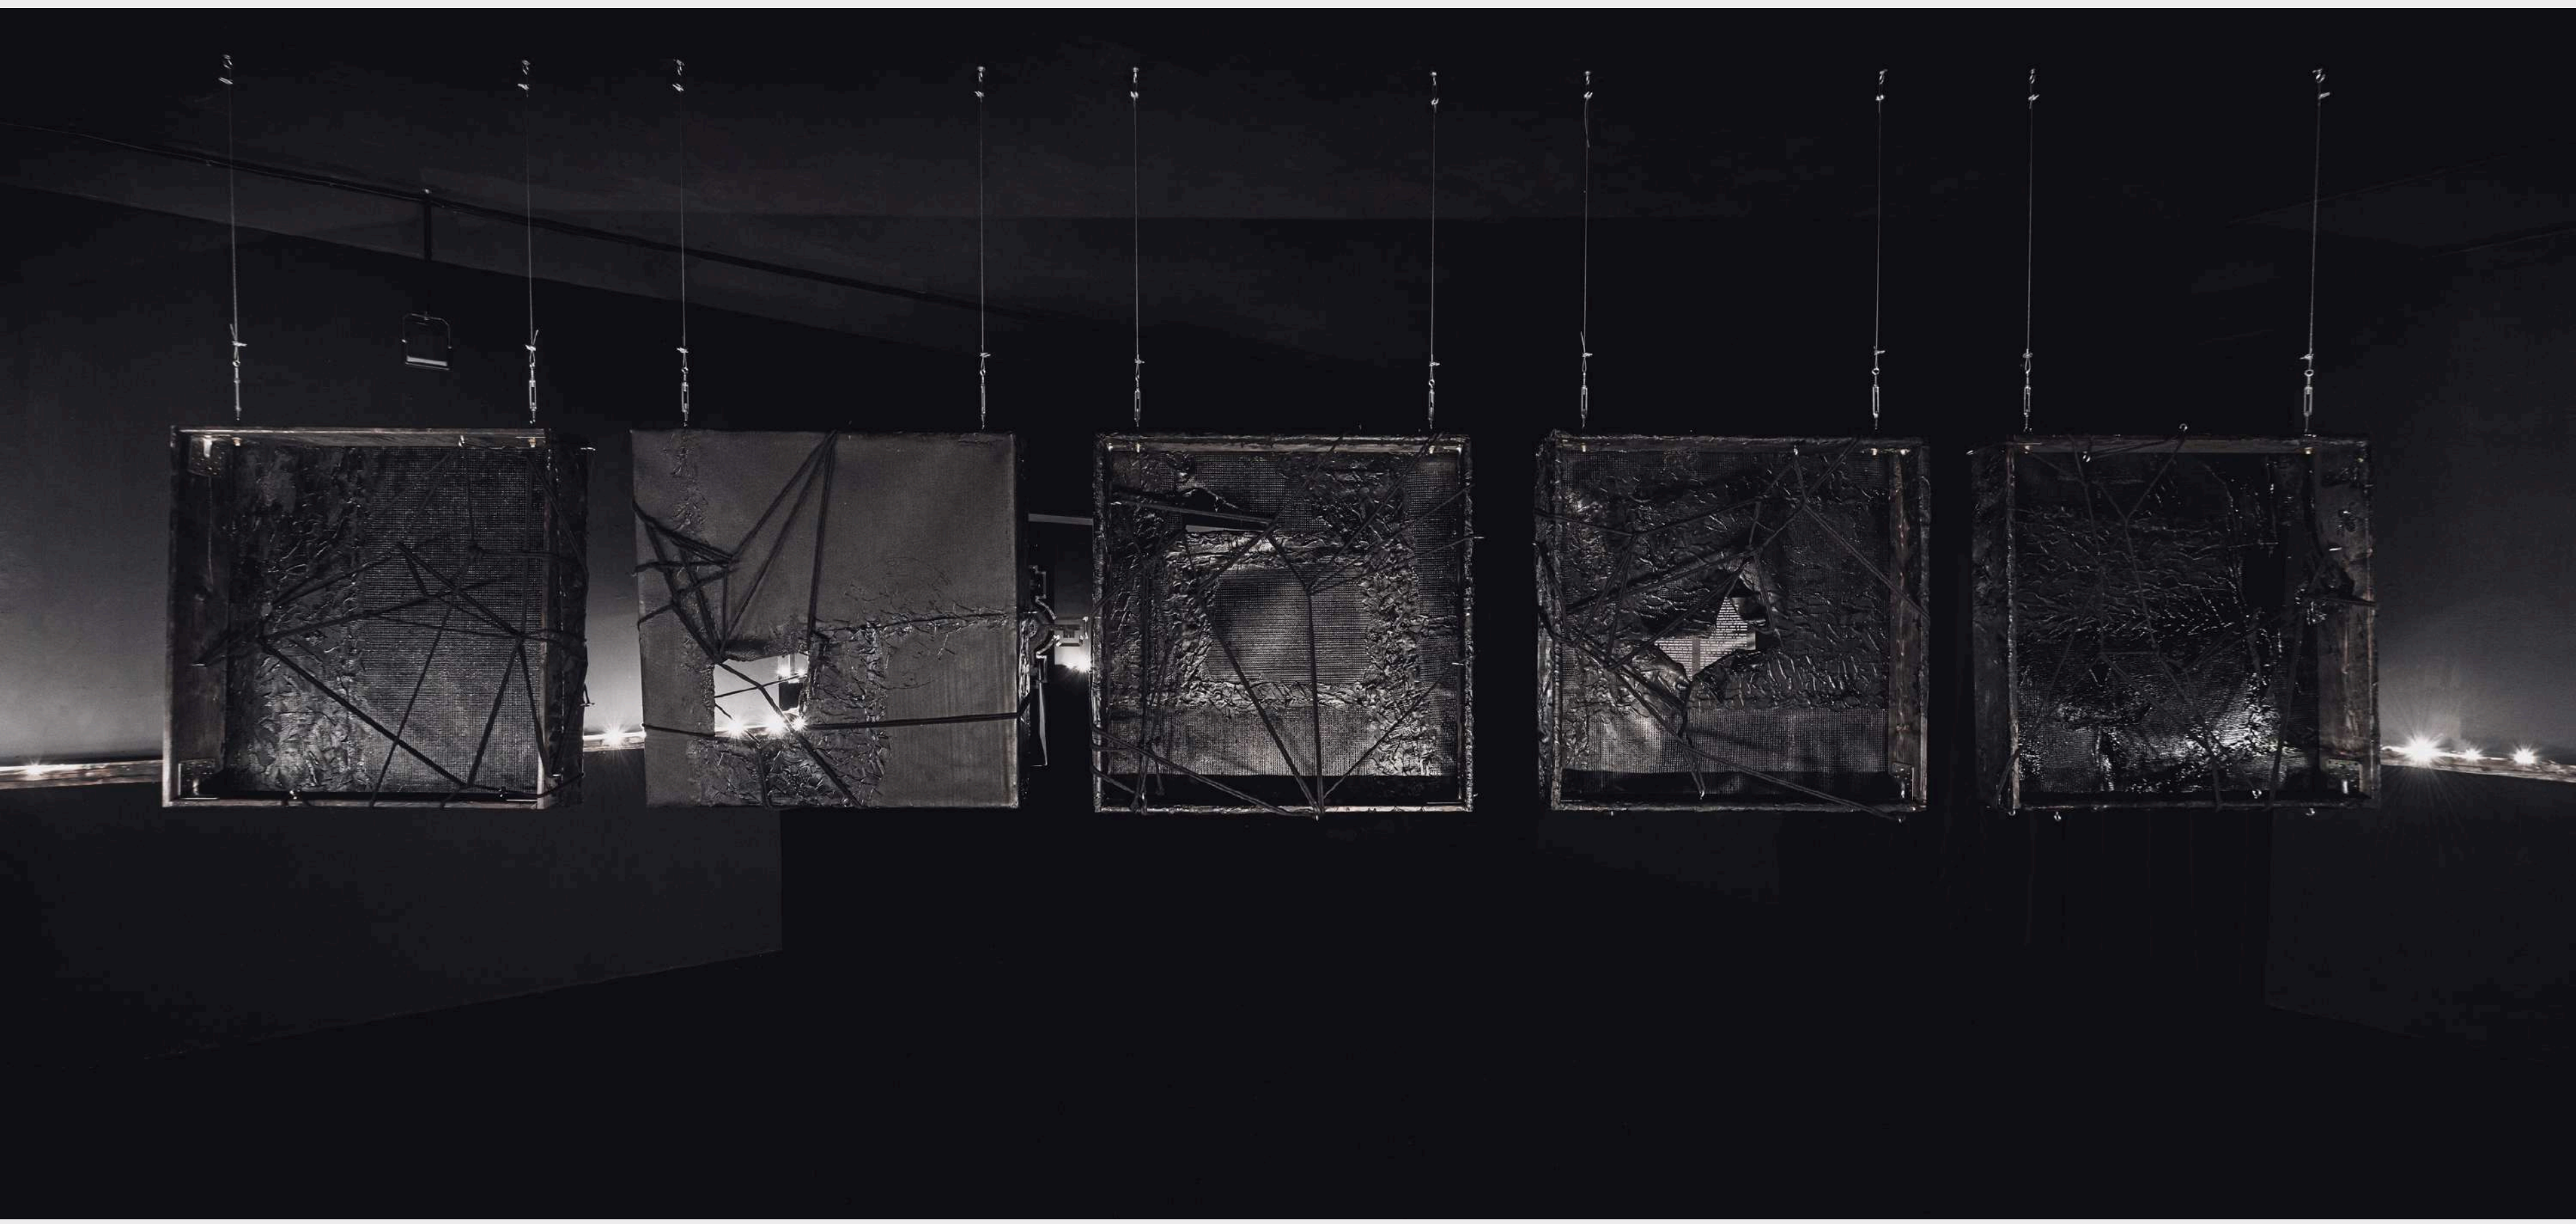

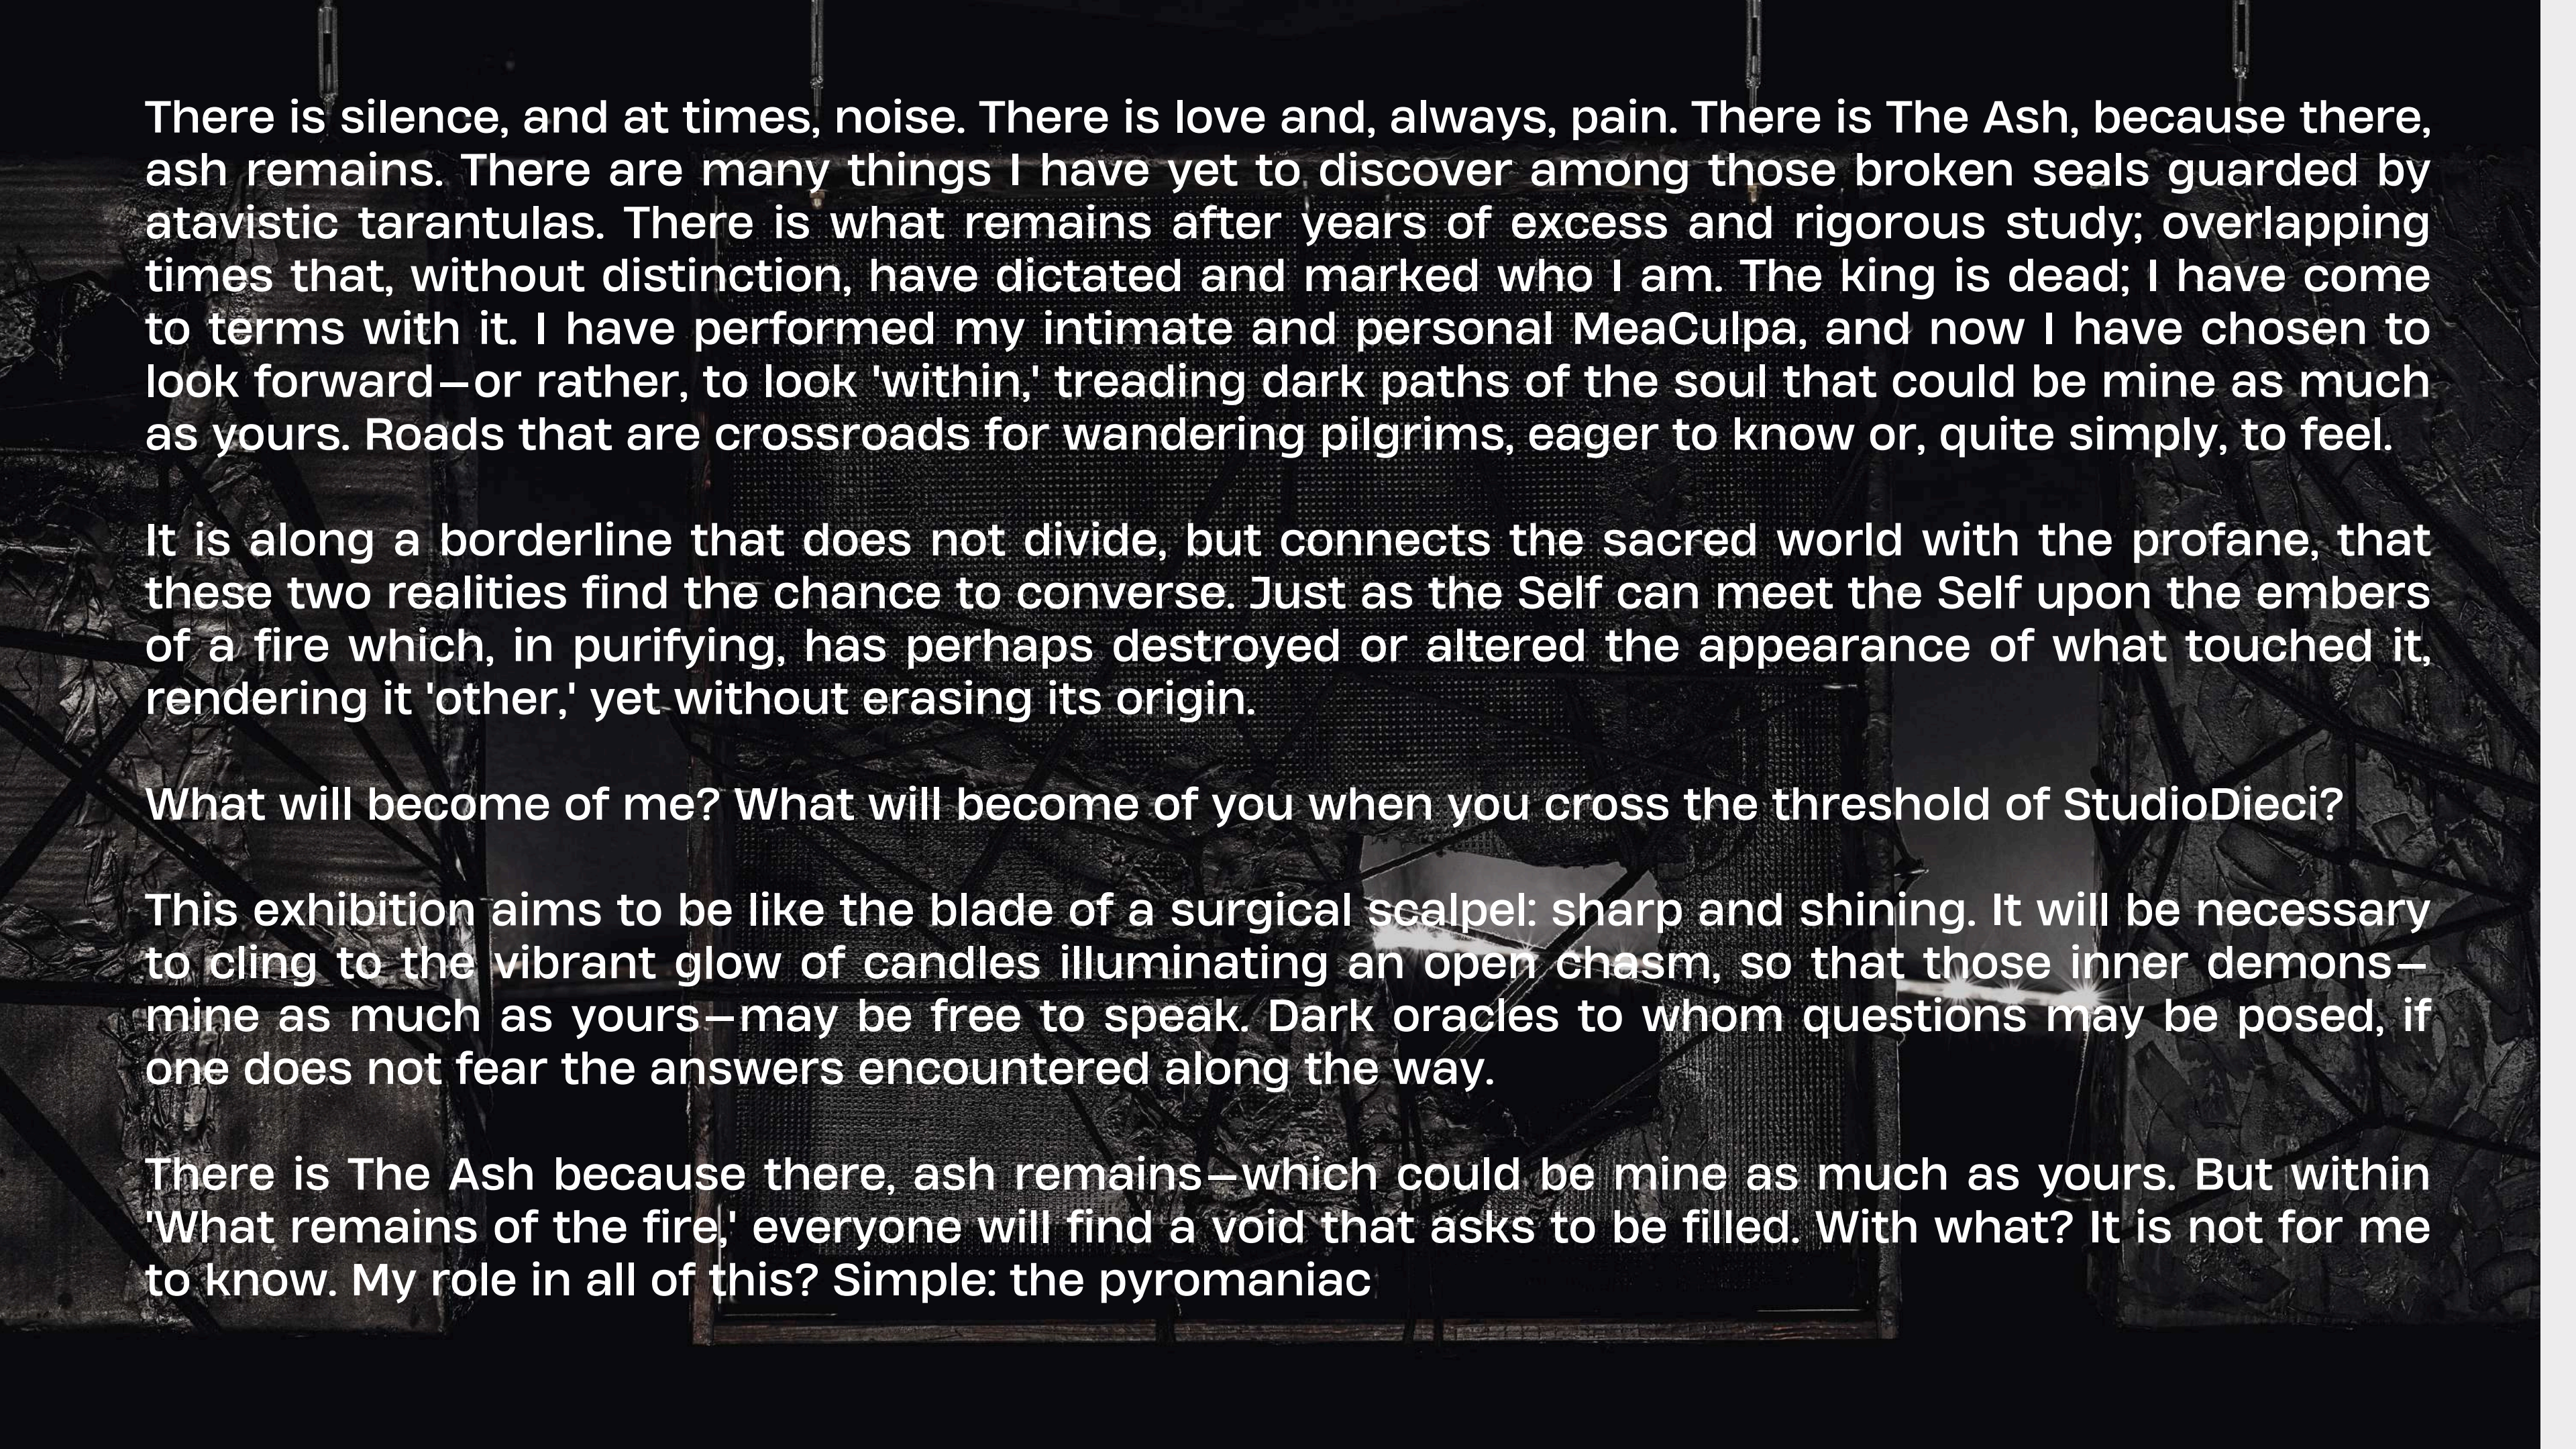

AT YOUR OWN RISK

2022, Installation composed of 5 elements,
Burnt bitumen sheathing,
rope 39 1/2×39 1/2 inches each

There is silence, and at times, noise. There is love and, always, pain. There is The Ash, because there, ash remains. There are many things I have yet to discover among those broken seals guarded by atavistic tarantulas. There is what remains after years of excess and rigorous study; overlapping times that, without distinction, have dictated and marked who I am. The king is dead; I have come to terms with it. I have performed my intimate and personal MeaCulpa, and now I have chosen to look forward—or rather, to look 'within,' treading dark paths of the soul that could be mine as much as yours. Roads that are crossroads for wandering pilgrims, eager to know or, quite simply, to feel.

It is along a borderline that does not divide, but connects the sacred world with the profane, that these two realities find the chance to converse. Just as the Self can meet the Self upon the embers of a fire which, in purifying, has perhaps destroyed or altered the appearance of what touched it, rendering it 'other,' yet without erasing its origin.

What will become of me? What will become of you when you cross the threshold of StudioDieci?

This exhibition aims to be like the blade of a surgical scalpel: sharp and shining. It will be necessary to cling to the vibrant glow of candles illuminating an open chasm, so that those inner demons—mine as much as yours—may be free to speak. Dark oracles to whom questions may be posed, if one does not fear the answers encountered along the way.

There is The Ash because there, ash remains—which could be mine as much as yours. But within 'What remains of the fire,' everyone will find a void that asks to be filled. With what? It is not for me to know. My role in all of this? Simple: the pyromaniac

CONTACTS

Diego Pasqualin Sculptor & Curator

Email: pasqualin.diego@gmail.com

Phone: +39 3934297661

Website: www.diegopasqualin.com

Instagram: @diegopasqualin

Studio: Vercelli, Italy

