Excerpt from romantically stocking thrift store shelves, chronic illness, and dry humping in art history. 2025, essay.

"Longing is the shape of my desire. I turn page after page, and longing hits me like Mack truck. I have the energy to just barely get out of bed. I'm not supposed to be smoking on the porch, but sitting right outside the front door is as far as I can go. I definitely do not have the energy to fuck. I open instagram and my algorithm shows me meme page after meme page run by the dolls posting about...you guessed it.. dry humping. Presently, I'm snuggled into my bed, fresh out of the hospital, rubbing parts of my body on pillows and stuffed animals. My period cramps are killing me. All I can wish is to be stoned, consensually grinding on someone who truly cares for me, as I bury my face in their chest, breathing them in. In a culture that's so obsessed with orgasm and penetration, and I'll admit for a time I was once too. Take me back to the good ole' days where dry humping has no goal or finish line, it simple just is."
